The Donkey and the Cotton

There once lived a salt salesman who had a donkey. Every morning, he put a sack of salt on the donkey and went to the nearby town to sell it. On the way, they had to walk across a river.

One day, while they were crossing the river, the donkey thought, "Ooh! This sack of salt is so heavy that I will get tired very soon. I want to take some of this load off my back." Just then the donkey slipped and fell into the water. Fortunately, the donkey was not hurt. But the sack of salt on its back fell into the water and got wet. Some of the salt disappeared in the water and made the load on the donkey lighter. The donkey was very happy. The salesman did his best to help the donkey get up and they continued their journey. From that day, it became a regular practice for the donkey to slip and fall in the river when they crossed it on their way to the market.

One day, the salesman noticed that it was no accident that the donkey slipped and fell with the sack into the water. "Oh! So this is the way I am losing my salt" he thought. He decided to teach the donkey a lesson.

Next morning, instead of salt, the salesman put cotton in the sack on the donkey's back. While they were crossing the same river, the donkey, as usual, slipped and fell into the river. But this time, when he got up, the load on his back was heavier. "Ooh! It is strange but the load has become heavier," thought the donkey.

The salesman looked at the donkey and said, "Dear friend, I saw you fall into the river every day in order to make the sack lighter. So, I put cotton in the sack today. When cotton is wet, it becomes heavier. Now you will have to carry it to the town."
